From the President

I hope you were a part of the large crowd who attended ARF's Fall Luncheon October 3 at the Alumni Center. Mike Martin, FSU's legendary baseball coach and our keynote speaker, regaled us with stories and well-chosen photos from our University's colorful athletic history. He balanced his sports stories with welcome comments emphasizing his commitment to the academic development of our athletes. Not surprisingly, at the end he presented us with a cordial invitation to attend the baseball games in the coming spring.

For the success of this event we owe thanks to many people in addition to Coach Martin: to President Elect Jim Melton, who organized the event; to Scott Atwell and the Alumni Association, for sharing the Alumni Center with us; to the law firm of Friedman and Friedman, the sponsors of our Meet and Greet social hour; to Andrew's for the meal; to Ruth Pryor, who serenaded us at the piano during the Meet and Greet; to Calvin Zongker, our intrepid photographer, and to the other Board members, who served as co-hosts and helped out in many other ways.

If you missed the Fall Luncheon, all is not lost. More opportunities are coming.

- Holiday Celebration. On December 11, 5:30-7:30, there will be a Holiday Celebration at the President's House, honoring members both of ARF and of the Faculty Senate.

- Campus Tours. On February 13, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., we will be treated to a tour of the College of Motion Picture Arts. Two days later, February 15, another tour will introduce the Dedman School of Hospitality. To reserve your place on a tour, contact Special Advisor Max Carraway (877-7010; mcarraway@fsu.edu).

Future issues of the Retiree Journal will give information about events that will come later, including the Barbecue (March 21, 2018 at the Seminole Reservation) and the Spring Luncheon (May 3, 2018 at the Alumni Center). Stay tuned!

Here is another date to keep in mind. On January 9, 2018, the ARF Nominating Committee will begin the process of choosing nominees for next year's Board of Directors. Past President Betty Lou Joanos, Chair of the Nominating Committee, invites you to send her (877-1092, bjoanos17@comcast.net) your suggestions for possible nominees. Consider suggesting yourself!

Now let me call your attention to a recent sign of the importance of ARF and of the continuing role of FSU retirees in the life of our University. In September President Thrasher announced the creation of a panel to examine and make recommendations on current policies concerning campus names and markers, including statues and other recognitions. This followed the President's condemnation of hateful and violent acts by white supremacists in Charlottesville, Virginia, and his pledge to protect free speech while ensuring the safety and well-being of students, faculty, and staff. Recognizing the integral role of retirees, President Thrasher is appointing the President of ARF as a member of that panel. I am honored to serve, and I will welcome your advice as the panel begins its work.

You will find more information about ARF in the next issue of the Retiree Journal, scheduled for publication in February, 2018. In addition, don't forget to visit our informative website:

retiredfaculty.fsu.edu.

If you haven't yet renewed your ARF membership, or become a new member, go now to the back cover of this issue! There you will find a handy form you may use for your membership, as well as for contributions to the scholarships we support.

Good wishes to all—whether members or not!

Walter Moore
President

Spring Luncheon Speaker

Our guest speaker will be:

Dr. Anne Barrett, Professor of Sociology and Director of the Pepper Institute on Aging and Public Policy at Florida State University. Her research examines our views of aging, including our age identity, aging anxiety, and attitudes about later life. She uses both quantitative and qualitative methods to explore how these aging views affect health and well-being in middle and later life. Dr. Barrett's research, which includes over 40 publications that have been cited over 2,300 times, is highly regarded and has been covered in news outlets including The New York Times, The Washington Post, and The Tallahassee Democrat.

What is the Pepper Institute on Aging and Public Policy at FSU?

For the past 40 years, the Pepper Institute on Aging and Public Policy has served as the multidisciplinary hub for aging research at Florida State University. We have 13 faculty associates and 17 faculty affiliates from across campus, including disciplines like sociology, political science, economics, urban and regional planning, psychology, and geriatrics. The Institute also connects with the community through a couple of its programs. For nearly a decade, the Pepper Institute has received funding to support the Safe Mobility for Life Coalition, focused on keeping older drivers safe and mobile, and helping them transition from driving when the time arrives. To accomplish this goal, we collect data – from older drivers, caregivers, health care providers, and law enforcement – and use it to create educational materials. We participate in lots of community events throughout the state, sharing our materials and talking with older drivers and their family members. The institute also is the home of the Osher Lifelong Learning Institute at FSU – a popular program offering classes to its nearly 1,200 members who are 50 and older, with most of them meeting at the Pepper Institute.

For more information about the Pepper Institute on Aging and Public Policy, see our website at www.pepperinstitute.fsu.edu.

IN MEMORIAM

Note
 from Jim Melton, ARF
 President Elect and National Liaison for AROHE

Our Association of Retired Faculty was one of 164 higher education retirement organizations surveyed in 2016 by the Center for Higher and Adult Education at Michigan State University. The report, “Transforming Academic Retirement: The Performance and Potential of Retirement Organizations in Higher Education” has focus on membership, operation, benefits and impact of Retirement Organization such as ours.

- Most organizations include both retired faculty and senior administrative staff. Most welcome spouses and partners. Only one third include persons nearing retirement or persons retired from other institutions.
- Programs/Services include: social events (89%), learning opportunities (87%), service opportunities (62%) and advocacy (62%).
- Fewer than half of organizations indicate they offer recognition/awards for retiree achievement/service, research support/funding, or programs on retirement issues and opportunities for those considering retirement.

According to the survey, 42% of organizations are free standing organizations with no formal affiliation with a university or college, 27% are accountable to or submit reports to the institution’s chief academic officer. Smaller numbers report to Human Resources on campus, alumni or development offices. The merits of organizational independence vs. affiliation with an institution is a subject worth discussion by the organization.

Most organizations have limited staff support which can limit initiatives and services.

Identified revenue sources include:

- Membership dues (80%)
- Subsidies from administrative units within the institution (51%)
- Annual fundraising (24%)
- Endowment (18%)
- Outside Grant Funding (15%)

The most commonly cited benefits of organizations included maintaining connections with the institution, maintaining relationships with colleagues and friends, service to the institution and aiding in the transition to retirement. Less frequently cited benefits include support for current faculty, mentoring, and increased or continuing financial contributions to the institution.

Challenges to sustainability include visibility and membership as most cited challenges. Other cited concerns include meeting members needs and maintaining adequate revenue.

A majority of organizations report the benefits of their organization outweigh their costs. Seventy three percent report their organization is somewhat effective and most are evaluated only informally.

It is helpful to see data from other educational institutions and compare our operational environment. We continue to highlight tours of campus locations, and our September tours of the Ruby Diamond Concert Hall and the Dirac Library and 3D Printer and February (2018) tours of the College of Motion Picture Arts and Dedman School of Hospitality have proved to be highly popular with our membership. Our luncheons this year will feature Baseball Coach Mike Martin and Dr. Anne Barrett of the Claude Pepper Institute on Aging. Recent programs included programs presented by students from School of Motion Pictures and Arts and the College of Criminology on issues of related crime in retirement communities.

Our continued support for the Sliger Scholarship Fund is ongoing, and currently we provide an annual grant to a University Presidential Scholar. We partner with the FSU Foundation to provide opportunity for our membership to continue to contribute to this endowment, which honors the 11th President of the University.

Our membership is involved in numerous levels of volunteer service, and Board Member Nick Mazza is leading an initiative to provide information on programs and agencies that can benefit from the services of our retired faculty. Initiatives will be highlighted in the Retiree Journal, which is published three times per year.

The Association maintains communications and liaison with the President of the University, Faculty Senate, Office of the Provost and Executive Vice President, FSU Library and other University Offices on matters of common interest. We recognize and honor the service of deceased members of our faculty community.

The key issue that can be gained from the survey and the review of our activities is that we can provide the opportunity for involvement at many levels and we need only for our membership to join with us and use the expertise of years of employment and service at Florida State University to advance our cause – to enjoy retirement and benefit from involvement.

Be the Change for a Child

Guardian ad Litem program

The children are our future, a saying that is cliché but as former educators and faculty we know is all too true. We as a community must do whatever we can to ensure children have the brightest future they can, especially children who have experienced trauma, abuse and neglect.

How can we do that? How can one person make a difference? By getting involved in agencies whose mission is to help these youth. The Guardian ad Litem program, a volunteer based program, works everyday to ensure abused and neglected children are cared for and have the brightest future possible. The volunteers advocate in the court and community for the children making sure the child's interest is heard and served. They work to ensure every child gets what every child deserves, a safe and permanent home where they can thrive.

As part of FSU, we have all come across youth who have overcome amazing odds to be there and whose path has been littered with challenges. The children the GAL program works with are those children. They need someone who is going to be there for them so maybe one day they will walk the stage and receive their diploma. Sometimes it just takes that one person who believes in them, who tells them they can do it.

GAL volunteers ensure the children don't fall through the cracks, that every child has their voice heard in the child welfare system. They ensure the child's educational needs are met. They ensure the child has the opportunity to be a kid, to participate in normal activities including learning to drive.

As retirees, not only do you have the time to dedicate to make a marked impact (the program estimates volunteers spend 8 to 10 hours per month volunteering), you also have the experience and knowledge to help guide a child to a better future. All volunteers work with a team, including a peer mentor.

As part of the higher education system, you worked for a better future for our community. Why not use your experience, knowledge and passion to make a difference in the life of a youth? Change one child's life and you change the world. There is a child who needs you, needs you to be their voice, to fight for them, to teach them, to care for them. Be that person. Be for the child. For more information, please visit www.gal2.org or call Sara Blumenthal at 606-1213.

[Sara Blumenthal is the volunteer recruiter for the local Guardian ad Litem program. With a background in communications, she joined the GAL program in 2013. Besides being the recruiter for the program, she also became a volunteer and has been an advocate for 12 children.]

The London Study
Centre Campus
by
Tom Hart

Located a few minutes from the Study Centre lies not only the West End, the major theatre district of London, but Trafalgar Square, Piccadilly Circus, the National Gallery, and opera and ballet theatres. The esteemed British Museum is only one block away.

In 1685, Thomas Tufon, Earl of Thanet, acquired a plot of land on the north side of Great Russell Street. On this land he built his grand terrace home, Thanet House. These buildings were constructed in the Georgian style of the time.

Buildings adjacent to the original Thanet House were built some time between 1685 and 1693. By the late 1600's these buildings, along the fringe of fashionable Bloomsbury, were frequented by members of the aristocracy and gentry. Indeed, both the Peacock Room and the Adams Room were once drawing rooms for the elite of London and both once had beautiful long country views to the north, up towards Highgate and Hampstead.

In December 1992, after 21 years of a wandering existence, the Florida State University purchased a freehold to four adjoining buildings in Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury. Registered on the British National Heritage list, this restored, refurbished, and redesigned, seven-building complex comprises a coherent and permanent home for our London Study Centre. Several features from these original buildings are still preserved within the modern surroundings.

This small oval window is in the stairwell. It was for the servants to observe the guests arriving to prepare for their special needs.

Adjacent to the Stairwell is the entrance to the Main Office.

The Main Office

Students enjoy the historic architecture along with comfortable flats (apartments), classrooms, a lecture hall/theatre, a library, three computer labs, and Wireless Internet throughout the building. The Study Centre is monitored by a 24 hour reception/security staff and requires secure swipe-card access. The building also provides a student lounge with vending machines and free laundry facilities.

Possible London Vacation?

During the months of August and December, when the students are not in residence, the University makes a limited number of flats available to the general public at reasonable rates. If you are interested in spending a week in London--at a prime location--you can get more information from Patti Wilmer [pwilmer@fsu.edu; (850) 644-1058], at FSU's Office of International Programs.

The Library and Computer Labs

The Study Centre complex includes 26 self-contained flats. These multi-roomed apartments are modern, light, spacious, and are fully equipped with everything students reasonably need, including showers and bathrooms, a flat screen television, full kitchen with microwave oven, electric range, refrigerator and freezer, bed linen, towels and more.

The Study Centre offers students a fully working library and three computer labs, operated by a professional librarian, IT, and library assistants. The library has a wide variety of material that includes movies, books, music, travel guides, and more. There is also a conservatory for quiet studying. To further accommodate students with laptop computers, the Study Centre has implemented wireless Internet Access throughout the building and flats.

SODEXO FOOD SERVICE

Florida State University announces innovative new dining services contract

Florida State University announced today a new, 10-year dining services agreement with Sodexo that will bring an expanded menu of healthy and locally sourced fresh foods prepared by culinary trained chefs to new and renovated dining facilities and restaurants across campus.

Chef Art Smith will serve as campus Culinary Ambassador as part of Florida State University's new agreement with Sodexo.

"We're excited about our new relationship and thrilled to bring Chef Smith, one of our most successful grads, back to Florida State to enhance the overall dining experience for our students and the entire campus community," said FSU President John Thrasher.

Other terms include internships and scholarships for students, funding for sustainability initiatives, meal plans for students and in-kind contributions for university events. FSU will become one of Sodexo's marquee accounts.

"I'm very proud of this agreement. Dining is obviously integral to student success, and by extension, the university's efforts to reach the Top 25," said Kyle Clark, vice president for Finance and Administration. "I expect Florida State to become one of the top dining programs in the country." Sodexo will assume operations this summer, prior to the start of the fall semester. Current meal plans and rates will remain the same with no cost increases to students, faculty or staff and no interruptions in campus food and meal services.

"Sodexo and Florida State University are a strong match. We share a vision for the highest levels of service and innovation," said Jim Jenkins, CEO Sodexo Universities East. "This partnership will expand FSU's reputation as a leader in enrollment, retention and student satisfaction through our quality of life services. Our team is looking forward to getting started."

Sodexo delivers more than 100 services across North America that enhance organizational performance, contribute to local communities and improve quality of life. The Fortune Global 500 company is a leader in delivering sustainable, integrated facilities management and food service operations.

Sodexo currently services a number of universities nationally including Georgia Tech, the University of South Carolina, Liberty University, Northwestern University and the College of William & Mary. Liberty's main dining facility is currently the No. 1-ranked dining facility in the country, according to BestColleges.com. The agreement was signed after a comprehensive review process that focused on improving the overall quality of the dining experience at Florida State. A committee of students, faculty and staff, including current Student Body President Nathan Molina, unanimously selected Sodexo with input from a dozen technical advisers and feedback from students and employees across campus.

“Students want more healthy options on campus, especially our students with specific dietary needs, and so that’s an area we put a lot of focus on during our review,” Molina said. “This new partnership will significantly increase the healthy options and alternatives available, and it will generate a lot of excitement and enthusiasm about eating on campus that doesn’t exist today.”

The new contract will retain many of the popular elements of the university’s current dining programs while adding a number of new features to transform the campus dining experience. The company will hold a series of informational town hall meetings in the coming weeks to answer questions and offer a sneak peek at what the future holds at Florida State.

The new contract will bring more culinary executive chefs to campus dining locations. In addition to healthy options, chefs will specialize in nutritious “Better from Scratch” homemade selections using local and regional foods and ingredients.

Campus residents and visitors will also find a wide selection of micro-restaurants that take the culinary experience at FSU to new levels of excellence. Sodexo will help launch the first of Florida State's new micro-restaurant facilities, "1851," on Jefferson Street this fall followed by other facilities during the next 10 years.

The agreement also includes athletics concession operations that will enhance the game day fan experience at campus venues including Doak Campbell and Dick Howser stadiums. The FSU Department of Athletics and Seminole Boosters, Inc. will work with Sodexo to develop new food offerings and service technology for upcoming seasons. The university's current provider employs nearly 1,000 full- and part-time staff at FSU, including a number of student employees. All current employees will be encouraged to apply for positions with Sodexo, which anticipates hiring the majority of existing employees and expects to hire additional staff, including more culinary trained professionals.

As culinary ambassador of Florida State University, Smith will make "healthy comfort cuisine" readily available across campus and will serve as liaison between the Florida Department of Agriculture's Fresh from Florida program and Sodexo's Floridian Flavors program.

Smith has received the culinary profession's highest awards and has cooked for some of the world's most famous celebrities. In 1997, Smith became the personal, day-to-day chef to Oprah Winfrey, a position he held for 10 years. Smith is executive chef and co-owner of restaurants in Chicago, Atlanta, Orlando and Washington, D.C.
